Certain U.S. Federal Income Tax Consequences:	As discussed in the accompanying prospectus under "Certain U.S. Federal Income Tax Considerations," legislation was enacted in 2010, contained in Sections 1471 through 1474 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986, as amended, that will impose a 30% withholding tax on withholdable payments (as defined below) made to a foreign financial institution, unless such institution enters into an agreement with the Department of Treasury ("Treasury") to, among other things, collect and provide to it substantial information regarding such institution's United States financial account holders, including certain account holders that are foreign entities with United States owners. The legislation also generally imposes a 30% withholding tax on withholdable payments to a non-financial foreign entity unless such entity provides the paying agent with a certification that it does not have any substantial United States owners or a certification identifying the direct and indirect substantial United States owners of the entity. "Withholdable payments" include payments of interest with respect to notes from sources within the United States, as well as gross proceeds from the sale of any property of a type which can produce interest from sources within the United States, unless the payments of interest or gross proceeds are effectively connected with the conduct of a United States trade or business and taxed as such. As enacted, these withholding and reporting obligations generally apply to payments made with respect to the notes. Under final Treasury regulations effective January 28, 2013 and other administrative guidance, these withholding and reporting requirements with respect to interest will be delayed until July 1, 2014, and withholding on gross proceeds will be delayed until January 1, 2017. Further, withholding will not apply to the notes outstanding on July 1, 2014, unless such notes undergo a significant modification after that date. Investors are urged to consult their own tax advisors regarding the application of the legislation and proposed regulations to the notes.

Additional tax considerations are discussed under "Certain U.S. Federal Income Tax Considerations" in the accompanying prospectus.
